

There's

a monster in my house

There is a monster living somewhere in my house. I know this because I have seen things it has done all around. For example, this afternoon I went upstairs into my bedroom and I found my favorite socks chewed up to pieces. I searched all around the house but did not find the monster. I only found other things the monster did. What type of monster would go upstairs and chew up socks?

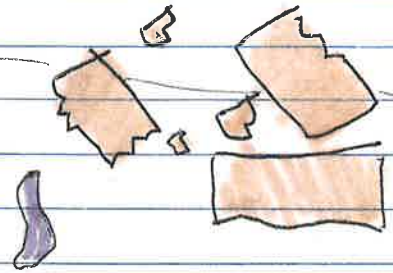

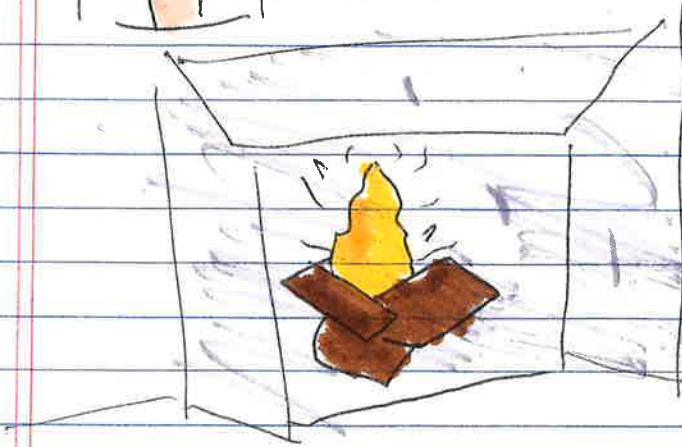

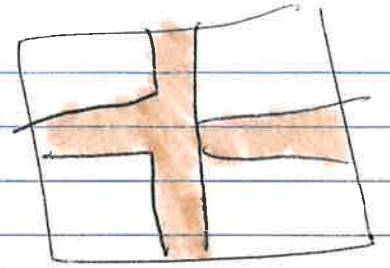

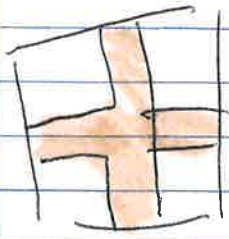

Later when I go downstairs I find big pointy muddy footprints. I follow them and hope they will lead to the monster but instead they lead to the door to go outside. What creature would leave big pointy muddy footprints in the house?

When I get outside I look and walk around. Then I fall into a hole that feels 5 feet deep. I am scared and I wonder "how will I escape?" Then right out of the corner of my eye I see some rope. I throw the rope to the top of the hole. I climb and climb and finally I get to the top. I am super dirty so I go upstairs and take a hot shower.

I am walking downstairs as I walk into the hallway, I notice some clear liquid. I think it is slobber. "Probably from the monster." I follow the slobber into the Living Room and I see big chunks of chewed up firewood. I was going to make a fire with that wood and now the monster has ruined the wood. What monster like creature would leave a trail of slobber that leads to chewed firewood?

Then I hear a gate rattle and I am trampled by the monster and licked all over.

But really the monster is not a monster
at all. He is actually my cute doggy monster. The End.
