

The Forest Fire

written and illustrated by Ava Kirby

Today, I got a phone call.

The person who called didn't say his name. He said to come to Victoria, Australia. His voice sounded familiar, and very serious, so I decided to go.

I took my private jet to Brisbane, Australia. When I arrived, there was a safari truck waiting to take me to Victoria.

I saw so many animals! It was blazing hot, and I was glad when we got to the safari center.

There I met the guy who called me on the phone earlier. He said his name was Max. I thought I knew him! He's a relative of my mother's, and he does top secret work!

Then he told me why he sent for me. He said that there were forest fires that were hurting the animals, and so he needed my help to put out the fires and transfer the animals safely to the forest animal hospital.

We went down to his forest laboratory to invent something that would put out the fires quicker and save more of the animals. We put our heads together, and here is what we came up with...

A backpack full of a special substance that would gush out of a hose. It kind of looked like a leaf blower!

When the substance lands on
it will put out flames plus every thing
around it within two yards.

After the lab testing, our product worked perfectly! We made a bunch more, and gave it to as many firemen as possible.

Because of our invention,
able to be saved, cured, and released, more animals were
