

1. When your friends come to visit your home, you should say asobi-ni kimasu.

When you go to visit your friends, you should say asobi-ni ikimasu.

2. Complete the following sentences about the Irasshai party. Write in roomaji.

Gesuto-wa kyuu-nin kimasu.

Otona -wa nana-nin kimasu. Kodomo-wa futari kimasu.

Paatii-wa roku-ji ni hajimarimasu. Ku-ji-ni owari masu.

3. What are the preparation plans for the party? For (a) ~ (c), choose the correct person from the list. For (d), fill in the blank with the appropriate word in roomaji.

(a) ( S )-wa furaido chikin-o tsukurimasu.

- (T) Tim-sensei
- (P) Patterson-kun
- (S) Susan-san
- (D) Dawn-san

(b) ( P )-wa keeki-o tsukurimasu.

(c) ( D )-wa sarada-o tsukurimasu.

(d) Keith-kun-wa sooji-o shimasu.

4. How do the students answer Tim-sensei's questions? Fill in the blanks in roomaji.

Patterson: Itsu-tsu tsukaimashita.

Dawn: Retasu-to tomato-to serori-to kyuuri-o tsukaimashita.

Susan: Furaido chikin-o tsukotte-imasu.

5. Write the roomaji pronunciations for the following kanji.

来ます	今日	何人	来月	何月
(ki)	(kyoo)	(nan-nin)	(raigetsu)	(nan-gatsu)
来年	きよ年	今年	何年せい	日本
(rainen)	(nen)	(kotoshi)	(nan-nen)	(Nihon)

6. The Japanese word for you is anata. Japanese wives also call their husbands anata. Calling your superiors anata is not polite at all.

So, the only time you might use anata in Japanese is with strangers.

The words for he and she are kare and kanojo. Japanese girls refer to their boyfriends as kare, and boys refer their girlfriends as kanojo. So, anata, kare and kanojo can be tricky words. When you are in doubt, always use the person's name.